Dr. William C. Rose,
University of Illinois,
Urbana, Illinois.

Dear Will:

Owing to the appointment of W. H. Griffith as Director of the Biochemistry Department of another medical school, I am seeking a biochemist who is primarily interested in nutrition for this vacancy. Although I would prefer a young man for this position, considerable latitude is possible in regard to salary and academic rank. The primary consideration is to obtain a good biochemist - either a promising young man or one who already has standing in the field of nutrition. The teaching duties will not occupy much time but it is desirable that the appointee be qualified to give a lecture course in nutrition to advanced students in biochemistry.

I hope that you will assist me by recommending any biochemists who might be interested in this position.

Sincerely yours,

E. A. Doisy
